DRYSDALES

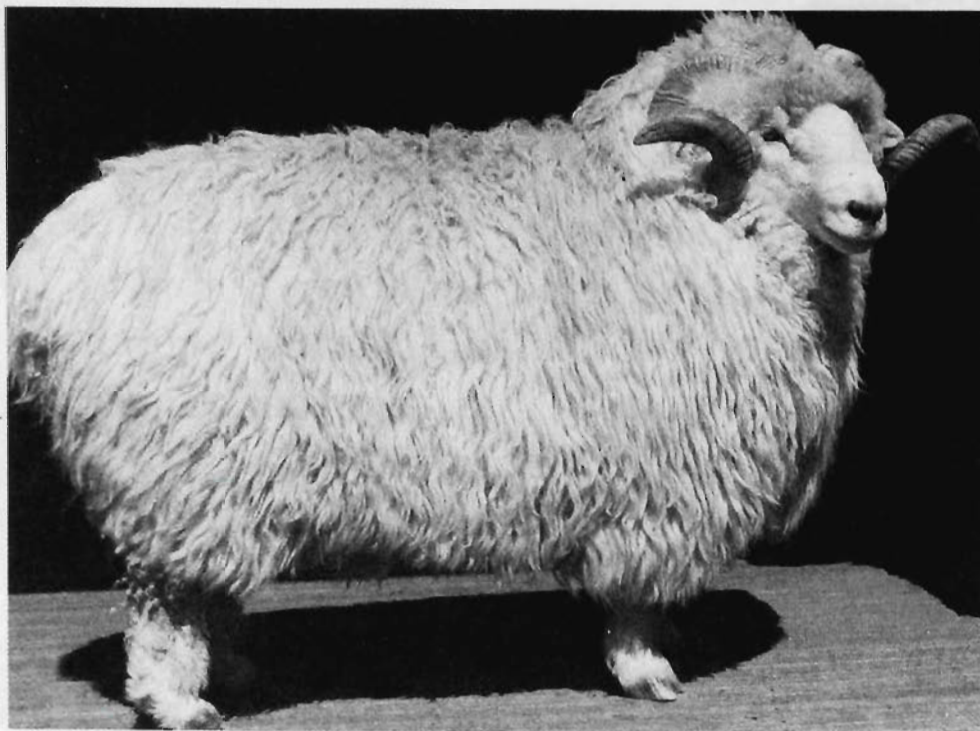

The first Drysdales were bred up from Romneys by Dr Dry at Massey University in New Zealand over 60 years ago. In 1975 the first Drysdales were imported into Australia and quickly became established and thrived in the higher rainfall areas. Like her Romney ancestor the Drysdale is very fertile, an excellent mother with an ample milk supply and hardy constitution.

There is a very large genetic pool of Drysdales in Australia; many hundreds of Stud Ewes and Rams have been imported over the years from New Zealand to compliment their Australian born cousins.

The Drysdale is unique in that the half-bred animal can be identified from the pure bred by a "shoulder patch", this is an area of short crimped wool fibres behind the shoulder in the arm-pit area. Genetically pure Drysdales do not exhibit a shoulder patch, thus eliminating the need to progeny test.

Only pure-bred rams are eligible for registration, and all Drysdale Stud Breeders must have Ovine Brucellosis Accreditation.

TUKIDALES

The Tukidale breed originated from a mutant Romney Marsh ram lamb named "Dreamy" born in 1966 on the property of Mr. Malcolm Coop in Havelock North, New Zealand. The ram showed the medullated or hairy characteristic distinctive carpet wool sheep. Dr. F. W. Dry, a famous New Zealand sheep geneticist, isolated a gene in Dreamy that differed from the other genes responsible for medullated fibres. A characteristic, noted by Dr. Dry, of the gene he designated as the "T" gene, was its extreme dominance. Mr. Coop's property name was "Tuki Tuki", the new breed was called Tukidale, and the gene responsible for the medullation in the breed, the "T" gene.

The first importations were made into Australia in 1975. A group of Oberon graziers imported two rams which were mated to Romney Marsh ewes. Further imports to Oberon, and Walcha, followed in 1976. As the number of Tukidale breeders grew, the imports increased until the early 1980's when enough quality Tukidale rams were being produced in Australia to satisfy requirements.

THE TUKIDALE SOCIETY AIMS:

- To promote the breeding of Tukidales carrying a fleece with a high percentage of medullated fibres.
- To promote the continuous development of the Australian carpet wool industry whilst ensuring the prominence of the Tukidale breed within that industry.
- To ensure both maintenance and improvement of the standards of the Tukidale from a commercial viewpoint.
- To promote the breeding and development of the Tukidale as an easy care sheep.

IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE ABOVE AIMS, THE SOCIETY CARRIES OUT THE FOLLOWING ACTIVITIES:

- Controls the registration of studs.
- Operated an obligatory annual inspection and classification for stud sheep.
- Is a foundation member of the Australian Carpet Wool Council.
- Produces and distributes an annual magazine, the Tukidale News,
- Produces several informative leaflets. These and the magazine are used as promotional material.
- Conducts an annual Sale as well as supporting a number of Field Days around Australia.

THE ELLIOTDALE

The Elliottdale is the only Australian breed of speciality carpet wool. The breed was developed at the Elliott Research Station in Tasmania during the late 1960s.

Advantages of the Elliottdale include:

- Poll ewes, rams can be polls to 3/4 horned.
- Low kemp and high medullation lead to high manufacturing yield.
- Lean carcasses – favoured for consumption.
- Sound feet, good for high rainfall areas.

Mainland: Laurel Nish,
P.O. Box 199,

Tasmania: Jan Horton,

The Carpetmaster

Carpetmaster sheep originated in New Zealand and, along with the other two New Zealand based carpet wool breeds, were developed over a number of years to suit the carpet wool industry.

The first Carpetmaster sheep were being bred in the 1950s as a flock with the dominant N gene.

Carpetmaster sheep created history in August 1974 when they became the FIRST carpet wool sheep imported into Australia, eight ewes and one ram brought from New Zealand to form the backbone of the Carpetmaster sheep breed in Australia.

MEAT PRODUCTION

Carpetmaster, being a dual purpose breed, produce a good lean prime lamb best sold over the hook and are also suitable for the Middle East market as either lambs or wethers.

SKINS

Carpetmaster skins are sold to a premium market price on the export market.

FERTILITY

Carpetmaster ewes are excellent mothers.

Fertility is one of the breed's features, with lambing percentages between 100% and 150% with survival rate to weaning also very high. The lambs are born with a birth coat of up to 5cms.

SPECIALTY CARPET WOOL

Carpetmaster sheep fleece grows 25 mm per month. The rate of wool growth results in twice a year shearing.

Carpetmaster ewes average 7–9kg per year of top quality carpet wool with some rams cutting as much as 10–12kg per year, even higher in certain circumstances.

The fleeces yield around 80% for ewes and rams and 90% for lambs.

SUITABLE AREAS

Carpetmaster is best suited to high rainfall areas of Australia, from 500 mm (20 in) upwards.

The black feet of Carpetmaster mean they can handle wet conditions better than most other sheep.

WOOL FIBRE

Carpetmaster produce specialty carpet wool. The fleece is medullated, white, resilient, high yielding, 40 microm plus, harsh to handle, with plenty of bulk.

Carpetmaster fleece is blended with other filler wools for carpet production. It is responsible for resilience and wearing ability of the carpet.
